FARM AID AVAILABLE

Requests are now being accepted from Virginia farmers for triple superphosphate as a grant of aid under the 1940 Agricultural Conservation program, according to an announcement today by S. K. Casnell, state AAA executive officer. The material is available as a part of the nation-wide soil building program and must be used on grasses, legumes or pastures in carrying out approved soil building practices under the AAA farm program.

Farmers who wish to obtain the material should apply to their county agricultural conservation association office. No cash collection will be made from producers receiving triple superphosphate as a grant of aid in the 1940 program. The approximate average delivered cost of the material will be deducted from farm payments earned under the soil building program.

Contracts have not been placed for all triple superphosphate that is estimated will be needed in the 1940 program, therefore the approximate average delivered cost per ton cannot be definitely determined at this time. However, the cost in no event will exceed $36.00 per ton, which was the 1939 rate.

In 1939 farmers were required to deposit 30 cents per 100 pounds of material requested, which was used to pay the cost of freight, handling, and part of the cost of the material. In addition, $1.50 per 100 pounds, or $30.00 per ton, was deducted from the conservation payment to the farm, which made a total cost to the farmer of $36.00 per ton.

No deposit at the time of requesting the material will be required in next year's program.

Tropical Products Need Well-Regulated Storage

Warm-natured fruits and vegetables from the tropics are more likely to break down under storage that is too cold than products of the more temperate zones. Some of the tropical products, particularly bananas, pineapples, mangoes, and avocados, lose flavor and texture when kept in the home refrigerator for several days. If served cold, they should not be chilled until immediately before serving.

Research by federal bureau of plant industry scientists shows that many products have a "critical storage temperature" below which injury is likely to result although this temperature may be several degrees above freezing. The low temperature damage may show up in many ways—in appearance, flavor, and texture; in chemical composition; and in susceptibility to decay from storage.

Most of the produce grown in temperate zones will stand temperatures nearer the freezing point than those from the tropics or those whose original home was in the tropical and warmer zones of the temperate zones. Tomatoes, eggplants and cucumbers are examples of exceptions. Potatoes held below 40 degrees Fahrenheit for some time undergo a chemical change in which the starches turn to sugar rendering them unpalatable.

Stored pears must be removed and ripened at temperatures ranging from 60 degrees to 70 degrees. If held too long at around 32 degrees some varieties lose their ability to ripen and "go dead."

Continued improvements of storage conditions has prolonged the market life of most perishable products and has helped retain their "fresh" taste and appearance.

Pre-Historic Man Made Mammoth Tusk Necklaces

Pre-historic man wanted his wife to look more attractive than nature made her, so he gave her a necklace. He fashioned beads from the tusk of a mammoth, pierced shells and the teeth of elk, fox and bison, and strung them together artistically on threads of animal sinews. Thus was made the first beautiful necklace, probably to celebrate some happy event, such as the arrival of a first-born child.

At La Souguete, near St. Leon-sur-Vezere, in France, at St. Germain-en-Laye, and other museums possess similar necklaces, none are finer or older than those more recently found. The Aurignacian period which they represent is the earliest period from which beads have been unearthed in western Europe.

Disguise Held Illegal

Michael Poulain, who does remarkable stunts as a "woman actobat," while dressed elaborately in feminine attire, was surprised to find he could not collect damages in a libel suit against a Paris magazine. He appeared in court in a woman's hat, with a black satin frock under an astrakhan coat. The court agreed with the magazine's counsel that it was scandalous for a man to go into court in a woman's clothes and turned down the action. The proceedings brought out the fact that police regulations strictly prohibit any one from appearing in a disguise in public places without a permit, except at certain festival times.

HEADS CENSUS OFFICE

ALEXANDER HUDGINS

The appointment of Alexander Hudgins, of Blackstone, publisher of several Southside Virginia weekly newspapers, as supervisor of the census for the fourth Congressional District, was announced today by the Department of Commerce.

Bayard M. Spencer, of Fort Mitchell, Lunenburg county, was named as assistant supervisor to work with Mr. Hudgins in handling the work for the fifteen counties and six cities in this area.

Mr. Hudgins will be required to open the Census office in Petersburg this month and the enumerators throughout the area will work from this office.

Mr. Hudgins, who has been editor of the Courier-Record in Blackstone for the past four years, is a graduate of Hampden-Sydney college and up until his present occupation was connected with a paper in Richmond.

Mr. Spencer, who is a merchant at F rt Mitchell, was a director in the Lunenburg county area for the South Hill Production Credit Association. He served as supervisor of the agricultural census for the ninth Virginia district in 1935 and supervised the business census for the Fourth Virginia district in 1936. He is a member of the Lunenburg county board of public welfare.

Bonnie Blue Flag

The Bonnie Blue flag was made of silk by the ladies of Jackson, Miss., and is said to have inspired the famous battle song of that name. The flag was presented to W. S. Barry, president of the convention that adopted the ordinance of secession in the house of representatives at Jackson, Miss., January 9, 1861. It had a white ground with magnolia trees in the centers, a blue field in the upper left-hand corner with a star in the center. It was finished with a red border with red fringe at the extremity of the flag.

American Eagle

The American eagle, sometimes known as the bald eagle, is no more beautiful in plumage than the Golden Eagle, but is more powerful and was graduated from the Virginia Polytechnic Institute in 1934. For three years after his graduation, Mr. Price was engaged in the practice of engineering with the United States Government and for two years served as First Lieutenant, United States Army Engineers Reserve, which time was spent as Company Commander of 2352 CCC, Baynesville, Virginia.

Mr. Price was appointed this week as Appomattox County Surveyor.

Mr. and Mrs. Price will make their home here after December 10th.

buenos Aires Racket

With the arrest of four men in Buenos Aires, a racket that had for its object a large-scale fleecing of tourists has been broken up. The racketeers after establishing offices hired a staff of agents and equipped them with fake official notebooks bearing the national arms of Argentina. Persons behind in their payments of inland revenues were interviewed. After inquiring the amount of capital each business worked with and how much the average monthly receipts amounted to, the agents offered to intervene in the settlement of the obligations, charging fees that ranged from $5 to $50. About $3,000 had been collected before the racket was discovered and stopped.

Town Budget For 1940 Passed By Council

The town council of Appomattox adopted its budget for the year 1940 at its regular monthly meeting on Monday night. F. L. Murphy, chairman of the finance committee, submitted a tentative budget of $6,800 for the town's general fund, and kept the items in balance with estimated revenues. The general fund indebtedness of $1,500 will be curtailed $1,000 during the year, according to the budget. Street lights, water rents and salaries consume over one-half of the budget total. Street labor and materials take up another $1,000, while such items as insurance, and routine expenditures permit only about $200 to go into the "miscellaneous fund."

The town sewer fund is balanced by maintenance costs and a sinking fund to pay interest and principal on the sewer bonds.

A study of town receipts so far during 1939, shows that the town has collected less in fines than during 1938. Collections in 1938 were $556.05 from fines, and thus far in 1939, fines have yielded $348.50. However, there are a few more days in the current year, and a few convictions in the town court might effect the comparative totals. During the month of November, there was such a lull in town legal procedure that not a single case was tried.

PRICE—ANDRIOLA

Mr. and Mrs. James Andriola, of 140 Kimball Terrace, Yonkers, New York, have announced the marriage of their daughter, Florence, to Mr. James Carlton Price, of Appomattox. The wedding was solemnized at the home of the bride in Yonkers, on September 16, 1939.

Mrs. Price is a graduate of Yonkers high school and Misericordia Hospital School of Nursing, in New York City. She was a member of the Nurse's Corps, United States Army, at the time of her marriage. Mr. Price is a graduate of the E. C. Glass high school, Lynchburg, and was graduated from the Virginia Polytechnic Institute in 1934. For three years after his graduation, Mr. Price was engaged in the practice of engineering with the United States Government and for two years served as First Lieutenant, United States Army Engineers Reserve, which time was spent as Company Commander of 2352 CCC, Baynesville, Virginia.

Mr. Price was appointed this week as Appomattox County Surveyor.

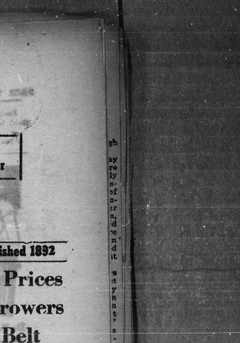
French Outpost Somewhere in Alps



Concrete outposts and roads are being hewn out of the French Alps as French army recruits to help through the paces calculated to make them fit for the western front theater of war. Huge guns have been hauled to 10,000-foot altitudes by the troops.

Study Vocation Plans Of Appomattox Students

Professor L. Crawley, principal of the Appomattox high school, has announced results of an interesting vocational study made at the local school. Professor Crawley says, "The school system now insists that our school should meet the needs of its pupils and much progress is being made along that line. Last week a survey was made of each high school pupil to find out what line of work each expected to follow after leaving school."

Professor Crawley added: "It may be of interest to note the choices made by the pupils themselves, after some instructive information and guidance had been made. We would like for our patrons and officials to help us to meet these needs in the best possible manner."

As their life work, the pupils indicated the following:

Tobacco Prices Please Growers In Dark Belt

Growers throughout Virginia's big dark tobacco belt are pleased with prices averages thus far in the marketing season. Warehouses opened Monday, December 4, with a full corps of buyers, including those of Imperial Tobacco Co.

Prices have average up to $1.00 per hundred above last year's average of 10.80. Prices on lower and medium grades have been especially encouraging. Pegged prices have prevented lower offerings from pulling averages down.

Yesterday the Farmville market sold 188,656 pounds of tobacco at an average price of 10.95. Tuesday the Farmville price average was 11.49. Every quality tobacco was selling as well yesterday as any day since the market opened, but, warehousemen said inferior offerings were received.

The Lynchburg markets yesterday handled 221,606 pounds at a price average of 10.07.

The Bedford market handled less than 25,000 pounds yesterday.

For the first time in years, dark tobacco was selling yesterday within two cents a pound average of bright tobacco, which averaged thirteen cents per pound throughout the old belt.
